Workers’ Rights – A Part of Social Justice

“O you who believe!
Be steadfast witnesses for God in equity...Deal justly, that is nearer to your duty” (Quran 5:8).

Some may not think of the theme of labor rights as being of central relevance to religious, or specifically Islamic, teachings. However, it is an issue that affects each one of us, and our deen/faith offers clear guidance regarding the rights and responsibilities of the worker and employer to each other. If we work for our living, whether as an employee or an employer, we spend a great deal of our time at our work, and it is our duty to understand and uphold the rights of workers.

Labor rights are directly connected to Islam; social justice is a central Islamic theme. The guidance toward social justice in Islam is intended to promote and maintain social order, harmony, balance and general welfare. It is a comprehensive system that balances personal needs with the general good, so that one compliments the other. Islam is both a religion and a comprehensive way of life and exemplifies justice for its practitioners. It is a formula that will satisfy anyone’s moral and spiritual needs and natural aspirations. Islam instructs people on how to live in harmony and peace with others, regardless of socio-economic status, race, gender or faith.

The Islamic concept of justice is based on equality and human dignity. God has enjoined justice and righteousness for all humans in all matters including but not limited to family matters, workers’ issues, trade and all relationships.
Mercy and Compassion

As in all matters, we are reminded that all human beings are created equal. If one of us is given a position of authority (such as an employer) over another, we have an obligation to treat our fellow creatures with compassion and fairness.

Prophet Muhammad, peace and blessings of God be upon him, said, "Your servants/workers are your brothers whom God the most High has placed under your authority. Therefore, a person who has a brother under his authority, should feed him out of that which he eats himself and should dress him with the same kind of clothes which he wears himself; he should not assign work to him which is beyond his capacity, and if you do so, then help him in his work." (Bukhari collection)

Prophet Muhammad, peace and blessings of God be upon him, said, "When your cook or servant brings your meal to you, if you do not invite him to sit with you and eat, at least give him some of the meal to take. After all, it was he who prepared it." (Bukhari Collection)

Prophet Muhammad, peace and blessings of God be upon him, also said, "Those who have mercy on others will receive the mercy from the Most Compassionate, Allah. Be merciful to those in the Earth, then the One in the Heaven, Allah, will be merciful to you"
Fulfill Fair Pay, and Promptly

With the same reasoning, the worker has the right to expect fair treatment and payment from his or her employer. In Islam, workers’ rights are made clear:

“And O my people! Give just measure and weight, nor withhold from the people the things that are their due” (Quran 11:85). The employer-worker relationship must be based on justice and mutual consent, honoring the dignity of the worker.

To illustrate this, it is ordained that workers’ wages should be clearly agreed upon before a worker commences his or her work, and these wages must be paid promptly. The Prophet Muhammad said, “Give the employee his wages before his sweat has had time to dry.” (Ibn Majah collection)

Justice and Fairness

In the Qudsi Hadith, Allah says, “O my servants, I have made injustice forbidden on me and I made it forbidden for you among yourselves, do not engage in oppression or injustice.”

Prophet Muhammad, peace and blessings of God be upon him, also said, “I will be the opponent of three types of people on the Day of Judgment,” and he listed them as “one who hires a worker, but does not pay him his right wages owed to him after fulfilling his work.” (Bukhari collection)

It is also required by employers not to give workers tasks beyond their capacity. Employers are accountable for their workers and have to ensure that their workers are justly treated at all times.
Mutual Work Ethics

It is the characteristic of a believer to fulfill promises and abide by agreements. In the Quran, Allah describes the believers as: “Those who are faithfully true to their trusts (all the duties which Allah has ordained, honesty, moral responsibility and trusts) and to their covenants.” (Al-Mu’minoon:8)

However, there must be equilibrium. As employers have responsibilities toward their workers, employees too have obligations toward their employers. The Prophet, peace and blessings of God be upon him, said

“God likes, if one of you performs a piece of work, that he should do it well.”

This saying of the Prophet reminds us that a Muslim who is entrusted with a job should do it in the best of manners.

Our Role

• Live by those Islamic ethics of compassion, justice, and honesty. We must be mindful of them in every situation, including in our roles as employer or employee.

• Be part of the political, economic, and social struggle to defend workers’ rights to fair living wages, health care, a safe work environment, the right to organize, the right to enjoy religious freedom, and the like.

As Muslims, we know that working towards establishing social justice is a mandate of our faith. The principle of equality in labor laws is a prerequisite to attaining social justice.